Kiran Bedi

Kiran Bedi is India's first female Indian Police Service (IPS) officer, born on June 9, 1949, in Amritsar, Punjab. A former national tennis champion, she joined the IPS in 1972 and became known for her bold and innovative policing methods. As Deputy Commissioner of Police in Delhi, she earned the nickname "Crane Bedi" for using cranes to tow illegally parked vehicles. Her most notable contribution came as Inspector General of Tihar Jail, where she introduced wide-ranging reforms including literacy programs, meditation, and vocational training. She also worked with the United Nations as a Police Advisor. In 2016, she was appointed the Lieutenant Governor of Puducherry and served until 2021. Bedi is the founder of two social organizations—Navjyoti India Foundation and India Vision Foundation.
